Even from the air, even over naked snow,
I’d never see so clearly,
see tracks as a map they can’t run away from, tracks just one step behind,
but it isn’t my job.
It isn’t the clouds’ job either,
topping the mountains like a jaunty hat.